

Checklist for moving bulls

Help build lifetime animal traceability and support disease management

Sending leased bulls to the works?

NAIT is about location and not ownership, if you're sending bulls to the meat processor make sure you record your NAIT location number on the ASD form. If you're sending the bulls to an accredited meat works, they will record the NAIT movement for you.

Tagging bulls

Animals considered to be too dangerous to tag qualify for an Unsafe to tag (UTT) exemption provided they are going direct to slaughter. UTT animals must be clearly marked and you are still required to declare a movement for them in NAIT before they leave your property.

UTT animals will incur a $13 levy (excluding GST) at the meat processor.

Failure to comply with NAIT obligations may result in fines or prosecution issued by the Ministry for Primary Industries.

Selling or leasing service bulls?

All my bulls are correctly tagged and NAIT registered at my NAIT location

I've completed a pre-movement TB test*

* If you're not sure, check with OSPRI if you need a pre-movement TB test.

I've filled out an Animal Status Declaration (ASD) form and a Declaration to Livestock Transporter (DLT) form

When the bulls leave: I've recorded a sending movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them leaving

When the bulls return: I've recorded a receiving movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them arriving

Buying or leasing bulls?

I've confirmed with the bull provider that the bulls are tagged and NAIT registered

I received an Animal Status Declaration (ASD) form from the bull provider

When the bulls arrive: I've recorded a receiving movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them arriving

When the bulls leave my farm: I've recorded a sending movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them leaving*

* If you're sending to an accredited meat works, they will record the movement for you. Make sure you record your NAIT location number on the ASD form.
