

Checklist for moving bulls

Help build lifetime animal traceability and support disease management

Sending leased bulls to the works?

Even if you don't own the bulls you're sending, make sure the meat processor knows they have been sent from your farm – record the correct NAIT location number on the ASD form. The meat processor will record the NAIT movement for you.

Tagging bulls

Animals considered too dangerous to tag qualify for an Unsafe to tag (UTT) exemption provided they are going direct to slaughter. UTT animals must be clearly marked and declared in NAIT prior to moving and will incur a $13 levy (excluding GST) at the meat processor.

Failure to comply with NAIT obligations may result in fines or prosecution issued by the Ministry for Primary Industries.

Selling or leasing service bulls?

- All my bulls are correctly tagged and NAIT registered at my NAIT location
- I've completed a pre-movement TB test*
* If you're not sure, check with OSPRI if you need a pre-movement TB test.
- I've filled out an Animal Status Declaration (ASD) form and a Declaration to Livestock Transporter (DLT) form
- When the bulls leave: I've recorded a sending movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them leaving
- When the leased bulls return: I've recorded (or confirmed) a receiving movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them arriving

Buying or leasing bulls?

- I've confirmed with the bull provider that the bulls are tagged and NAIT registered
- I received an Animal Status Declaration (ASD) form from the bull provider
- When the bulls arrive: I've recorded (or confirmed) a receiving movement in NAIT for the bulls I bought/leased – within 48 hours of them arriving
- When the leased bulls leave my farm: I've recorded a sending movement in NAIT – within 48 hours of them leaving*
* If you're sending to the works, they will record the movement for you. Make sure you record your NAIT location number on the ASD form.
